

Relationships appear to be very important to God. Jesus Christ felt so strongly about them that He overthrew the religious rules of His day to seek relationship with people in every walk of life. The Cambridge Dictionary says that relationship between two people or groups of people is defined by the way they feel about and behave towards each other. This definition best describes the focus of this book. An excerpt from this book includes answers to these actual questions and many more: Question: Is it wrong for me to want God to make our relationship more personal for me? Is it wrong to want to feel emotionally loved, comforted, and secure? Question: My parents were always so critical of everything I ever did. And now my children are extremely critical of me. I feel like I cant win. What am I missing here? Question: For years, I have carried the bulk of keeping my marriage going, and I am literally worn out. If I leave my spouse, will I ruin my chance of ever being used in ministry by God?
